CALL FOR PARTICIPATION

AIM

The Aspen Young Leaders Program is designed for emerging leaders (age 20–40) from Central Europe, in various professions such as politics, business, the arts and sports. The Program's main goal is to encourage its participants to reflect on the fundamental qualities that make a successful leader in today's world. It also aims to help young Central Europeans network and discuss issues critical for society's development.

Workshops, moderated discussions and keynotes give the participants the opportunity to explore the challenges and conflicts that leaders must face in deciding policies and strategies for their organizations, communities and themselves.

ORGANIZER

The Program is organized by the Aspen Institute Prague, the Central European partner of the Aspen Institute US, in cooperation with experienced leaders and expert moderators, acting as dialogue facilitators. The Program is supported by VIGO Investments as well as RSJ a.s. and Neuron Fund.

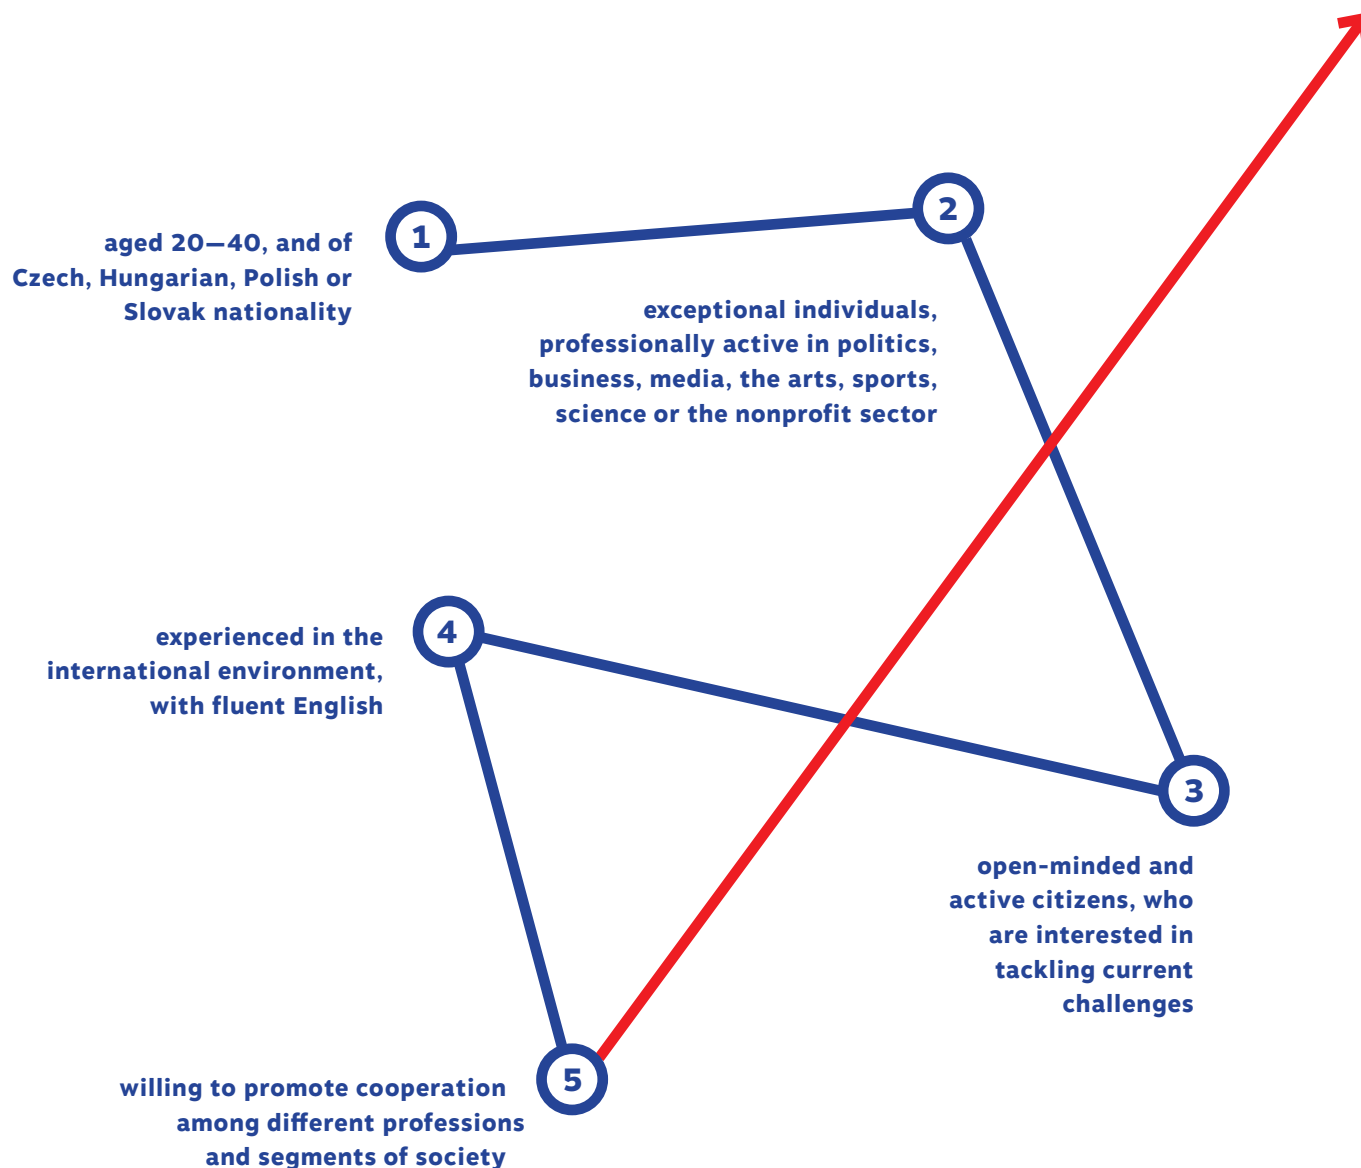

AGENDA

Taking place in the remote reaches of the Tatra Mountains in Slovakia, the Program is consistent with the basic Aspen idea to step away from daily routine and reflect on underlying societal values. It offers various formal and informal activities to create an environment conducive to sharing ideas, learning and networking. The agenda includes lectures, trainings and case studies as well as leisure activities.

Highly interactive discussions address topics such as — but not limited to — leadership, ethics and personal development. Participants have the chance to meet outstanding professionals active in the fields of politics, business, the arts and sports.
